Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-5, 7, 9-12, 14-18, 20, 22-25, 27-29, and 32-34 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Berger (5084988).

Berger shows shoe soles and method of using shoe soles having a heel indicator (boundary between elements 4 and 5), and a plurality of calibrated lines (6 and boundary between elements 3 and 5) with indicia comprising calibrated numbers and/or lines (6 and 7, see column 3 lines 1-10) substantially as claimed except for the exact indicia. Standard shoe sizes are a type of well known and conventional calibrated marking. It is also noted that "Where sole distinction set out in the claims over prior art is in printed matter, there being no new feature of physical structure and no new relation of printed matter to physical structure, such claims may not be allowed; it is only where claims define either new features of structure or new relations of printed matter to structure, or both, which new features or new relations give rise to some new and useful function, effect, or result, that claims may be allowed" and "sole different over art being in printed matter (indicia), different in substance, language, or meaning of the same whether generally accepted or arbitrary, cannot serve to impart patentability". (Ex parte Gwinn, 112 USPQ 439-449). It would have been obvious to use any calibrated markings, including the well known and conventional shoe size calibrated markings (especially since the article is a shoe), for the calibrated lines/indicia on the shoe sole and in the method of Berger to allow the user to easily locate a shoe in the right shoe size range.

3. Claims 8, 13, 21, 26, and 31 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Berger in view of either Rosen (4931773) or Sigoloff (4712314).

Berger as modified/discussed above shows a shoe soles and method of using such substantially as claimed except for providing a transparent layer over the bottom of the outsole. Rosen or Sigoloff teaches providing a transparent layer (34 or 26) on an outsole over an area of indicia. It would have been obvious to provide a transparent layer as taught by Rosen or Sigoloff in the shoes and method of Berger to increase the durability and to make the indicia easier to read after the shoes have been worn.

Response to Arguments

4. Applicant's arguments filed 10/9/03 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

In response to applicants' arguments directed towards the calibrated markings of Berger, shoe size calibrated markings would have been clearly an obvious choice in view of the article being a shoe. In fact it may be unobvious to use a different type of calibrated marking. It is also noted that "Where sole distinction set out in the claims over prior art is in printed matter, there being no new feature of physical structure and no new relation of printed matter to physical structure, such claims may not be allowed; it is only where claims define either new features of structure or new relations of printed matter to structure, or both, which new features or new relations give rise to some new and useful function, effect, or result, that claims may be allowed” and “sole different over art being in printed matter (indicia), different is substance, language, or meaning of the same whether generally accepted or arbitrary, cannot serve to impart patentability”. (Ex parte Gwinn, 112 USPQ 439-449).
